Uncence you discovered that you want to take away, spend some time researching and talking to other experienced pilots to get your opinions about this niche and if you will find fun. You can be a jack of all business, but I recommend working for just one thing before expanding out. This graphic does a wonderful job of putting almost all kinds of niche that exists in Eve Online, and even in the most combative professions there is a lot of room to specialize. If you are genuine and respectful, most players will take the time to help you and some are going to go beyond it. It happens, and no amount of preparation will save it. But instead of throwing your hands in frustration and giving up, what you can do is take this experience and learn from it. They also have an immense repository of information that you should be looking regardless of who you joined. Blow up earlier, instead of later Eve online is a game about conflict, and while some players do everything to avoid it, it is much better to learn to embrace and arrest violence as a good measure. You do not have to take time to learn how each ship and module works, but wants to be an asset for those who play, being competent in the captain's chair. For some, this means losing thousands of real dollars
